Lectures: 43 HOURS

Name of Course: Certificate Course in Chemistry Laboratory Safety

Eligibility: Undergraduate

Course Objectives:

1. To make the students use four simple principles of laboratory safety to recognize hazards, assess the risk of those hazards, minimize the risk of hazards, prepare to respond to emergencies.
2. To demonstrate the working knowledge of laboratory safety.
3. To develop the skills of using safe laboratory techniques.
4. To nurture a culture of safety in the laboratories.
5. To learn to tackle laboratory inspections, and also working with chemicals.

Course Outcome:

1. Students will acquire a comprehensive knowledge regarding precaution to be taken while working in chemistry laboratory.
2. They will be able to apply the understanding, awareness to prevent accidents, damage & injuries to themselves as well as to others.
3. Laboratory safety skills will enhance employment opportunities.
4. This will establish the notion of a “safety culture” that should permeate all laboratory activities.
5. Being aware of the safety procedures will make them a valuable future employee.

Introduction:

Many laboratories pose significant risks to the chemists due to the use of hazardous chemicals. The prevention of laboratory accidents requires great care and constant vigilance. Risk factors include high voltages, high & low pressures, and temperatures, corrosive & toxic chemicals, chemical vapors, radiation, fire, explosions etc. Measures to prevent laboratory accidents include safety training, general laboratory guidelines, enforcement of laboratory safety policies, knowledge of laboratory reagents, safe use of laboratory equipment, the use of personal protective equipment, waste management procedures, responding to chemical spills in the laboratory, the use of safety protocols for, particularly, risky operations etc. Also, it is important to have knowledge of appropriate First Aid in case there is an accident.

We believe safety is a very important part and a responsibility shared by both students and instructors. Learning safety instruction is a part of chemistry education. Skills gained in the lab will serve in future careers and enable the student to stay safe while working in the laboratory. Use of critical thinking in applying safety principles will make the students a better chemist.

In view of this, the college preferred to introduce this certificate course for the benefit of rural students. This course will cover all the aspects needed for education of Chemistry Laboratory Safety.
